What is the best way to learn?

Look at the tips below and ILLUSTRATE them.

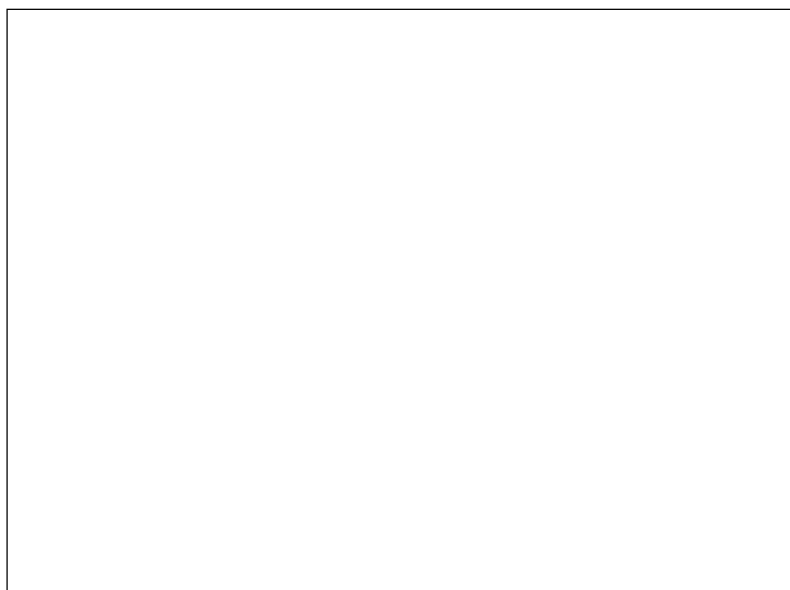

While you work on that, think about the question in the title. What is the best way to study?

Is that how you normally study? Do you think there is another form of learning which is better than the ones displayed here?

I. Reading is one of the oldest forms of studying that is still done today.

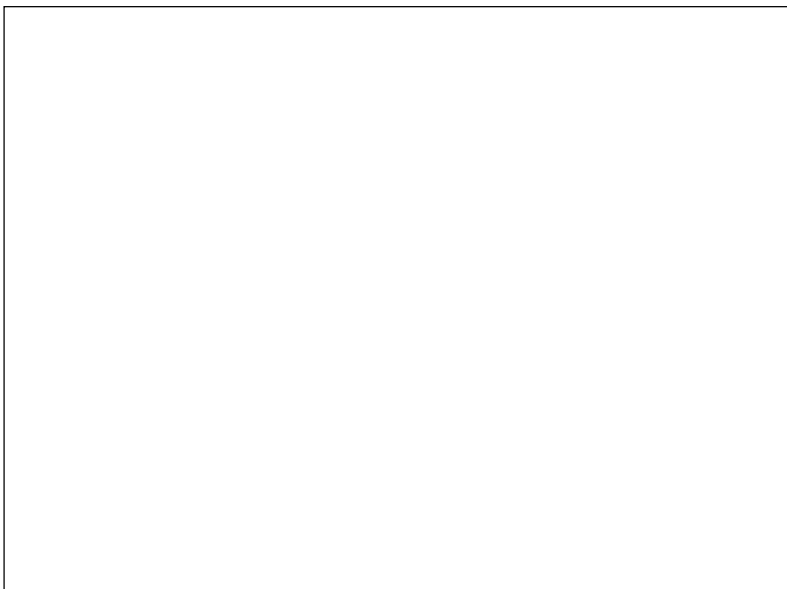

It requires interpretation skills and usually a silent environment, so that you can focus. It's not the most dynamic method, but for many it is quite effective.

II. Watching videos is a "modern" way of learning, but it comes from the oldest learning tradition: listening to someone else. Humans have been learning from each other since the earliest civilizations, way before writing was invented.

III. Studying with a friend is usually a preferred method within kids and teens. Their company makes us cheerful, and studying may feel easier because of that. Of course, sometimes it gets difficult to study with a friend because all we want to do is chat and joke around! If you are able to focus, though, it can be great.

IV. Explaining what you have studied to someone else is called “learn by teaching” by some educators. It involves previous work – such as research and preparation – but it tends to pay off by making the content really stick with you.

V. Playing games – yes, you heard it right, playing games! Not every game has a lot of learning behind it, but the right ones can take you far. Like studying with a friend, it creates an atmosphere that favors learning.
